On the Third Day of Christmas... This week, the US House of Representatives voted to pass a budget that cuts SNAP benefits, raises the retirement age, and prohibits federal funding of all abortion. Rep. James Lankford (R-OK) voted for the bill, and all of his GOP colleagues did as well. Let's start by talking about the cuts to food assistance. Republicans generally resist food stamps but this year have added the cuts they cannot stomach. They started by cutting the program so people lose benefits when they move to another state or if their income rises. For a family of two adults and two children, that's $90 a month. They're clearly targeting low-income women and children, the obvious intended victims. They eliminated a provision that restored benefits to people who briefly went without them because they were in a temporary situation. They also cut $16 billion for food banks. But the real reason this is so harmful is the cut to inflation, since this reduction takes effect immediately. The Congressional Budget Office found that the cut would add an estimated 1 million people to food stamp rolls next year. Republicans further cut food stamps when they made eligibility for food stamps more stringent, and we can expect more people to get kicked off the rolls under the new rules. For children, the SNAP cuts could mean not having enough to eat because the dollar amount of the cuts is less than their average daily need for a family of two. (While food stamps benefits have increased in recent years, the amount available to a family of four for a single day costs the same as the benefit received during the last three months of 2012.) This is particularly important for children, who still need to eat on a daily basis. According to the USDA, 18% of children ages 5 to 17 are food insecure, meaning they have a limited food supply or were forced to use food pantries because of a lack of access to food. A Food Research and Action Center analysis of data from the National Women's Law Center found that single moms make up 45% of all SNAP recipients, and that women have a special need to eat: "Women spend on average more than twice the amount of time on the work force as men, yet they are more than 50% more likely than men to
