Alfred Hersch Alfred Hersch (born 1867 in Rotterdam) was a Dutch banker and philanthropist. He was chairman of the Dutch bank ABN Amro, from 1912 to 1937. Biography Alfred Hersch was the son of Moses Hersch (1835-1902), the Jewish-born founder of the Dutch bank ABN Amro. Moses Hersch was a merchant and philanthropist who was very generous and donated the income from the bank to the Dutch Red Cross in 1890. The income of the Dutch Red Cross was to support the world-wide humanitarian work of the Red Cross. This action in turn influenced Alfred Hersch. His father's death in 1902 took his mother Sophia (1832-1914) in charge of the family. As a result, Alfred Hersch was raised in a close and caring atmosphere and was brought up with values of internationalism and philanthropy. His education started in 1880 with the German Gymnasium in Amsterdam. In 1887 he enrolled in the University of Leiden, where he continued his studies until 1889. Here he studied law and economics. He then continued his studies in Paris and Germany. After returning in Amsterdam he became member of the Amsterdam Board of Trade (from 1889), and a member of the board of the chamber of commerce (1893). At the age of 32 he was appointed director of the bank New Amsterdam (later ABN Amro) and became member of the board in 1910. In this position he was to represent the Amsterdam Board of Trade. Hersch was one of the largest financier in the Netherlands at the time. He also worked as a board member of several non-profit organizations. For example, he was chairman of the Dutch Society for the Scientific Study of Nationalities (SSN) from 1899 to 1905. Hersch was married to Mrs. Florence Selicke (1868-1941) of Hamburg in 1896 and they had five children. His daughter married the banker Hendrik van Eeghen. He retired from the bank in 1937 and became chairman of the supervisory board of the Dutch Red Cross.
