Security has begun the process of requiring that certain truck drivers be subjected to enhanced background checks, requiring them to show documentation that they are lawfully present in the country, according to a report published by the Associated Press. Truck drivers who don't comply will face the loss of their commercial driver's licenses, the report said. The U.S. government has struggled with long-standing problems involving truckers, including an escalating black market of illegal drug trafficking and a lack of adequate background checks on drivers that can stop undocumented migrants from getting into the U.S. The Department of Homeland Security says the pilot program will cover drivers of large commercial vehicles that haul certain goods. Officials believe illegal immigrants may be more likely to transport contraband such as drugs and other illegal materials, the report said. According to the report, a survey of drivers who will be required to carry valid forms of identification will begin Dec. 14. The identities will include driver licenses and enhanced federal documents. Some drivers may also need to carry a federally recognized document from another country. Drivers
