The strength of responses to distension is being examined with respect to time, level of bladder neck and urethral distension, bladder pressure and fluid composition. Electromyographic activity of the proximal and distal part of the bladder neck and prostatic urethra is recorded simultaneously. The neural mechanisms for any motor responses to distension and for the observed reflex and non-reflex responses are being studied. Time of onset and duration of reflex and non-reflex responses are being determined for various distension pressures and fluid composition. The aim of the study is to evaluate the pharmacologic and sensory mechanisms responsible for the bladder and urethral responses to distension. "" Then I want to go back to my terminal again.
