One of the most popular applications on Windows is Microsoft Word. This is mostly due to its versatility. It's usually the first program I start using after a fresh install. It's basic, straight forward, and provides both the tools for new users and a step by step walkthrough for more experienced users. The ability to create formatted documents is a standard feature, but much of what you can do with it can be done with basic formatting skills on the side. With text, tables, headers, and built in styles comes the potential for data storage, organization, and even statistical analysis. In this guide we will show you how you can configure Microsoft Word 2007 to create professional looking documents. Before we begin, be sure that your Word document will be saved to the default location and that you have enough disk space to accommodate the file. Click the File menu, then Save As... Enter a file name for your document, then click Save. Step By Step Guide: Step 1 - Start Microsoft Word Click Start and click All Programs to open the start menu. At the top, click on Microsoft Office 2007, and then click on Microsoft Word. Once opened, you should see the following options: Step 3 - Open the Word Options Click File on the menu bar, and then click Options. The Options window should open with the following options available: To configure the look of the document, we will open the Text section of the Window. Step 5 - Open the Text and Paragraph Properties Section Click the Paragraphs and Lists tab. The first option on
