will be the first anniversary of the Euromaidan revolution, and the wave of protest has not left us: day after day the people of Ukraine rise against a corrupt and tyrannical regime. In the north of the country, near the Ukrainian capital, Kiev, the Euromaidan-slogan “Europe from the east” gets support from the people who believe in equal rights and freedom. While the so-called separatists in the east of the country - which are supported by Russia - seek independence from Ukraine. The separatist forces have control of about a dozen cities in the east of the country, including Kharkiv, Donetsk, Luhansk and the Crimea region. They demand the recognition of sovereignty, and establish new government structures. The inhabitants of the eastern Ukrainian regions are continuing the crackdown on pro-Russian separatists. The task was given to the Ukrainian security forces, which used deadly force against the demonstrators, who themselves are unarmed civilians. The Ukrainian army has also been called in. Artists from all over the world are taking part in the action “Art of Protest” to rally and support the Ukrainian people. In Brussels, Belgian artist Bastian D, who has a residence in Berlin, is fighting for free art, and is a signer of the Euromaidan petition. In Amsterdam, American artist Anselm Franke is visiting the affected areas, painting landscapes of these regions.
