Fluid overload can be a complication after shoulder arthroscopy. Typical findings on examination include poor skin turgor, swelling, chest rise, and a total fluid overload (TFOL) of approximately 1,000 mL. Infection is usually another cause of a TFOL. In our case, we postulate that the TFOL was caused by a combination of fluid overload after shoulder arthroscopy and the perioperative use of 1,000 mL of normal saline as a filling material.

Although historically the reported complication rate of shoulder arthroscopy has been 8%, this complication can be fatal if not recognized and managed. Q: Why is the git stash command affecting uncommitted changes? I have a situation where one of my Rails apps is getting kind of big and hard to understand. I have already done some of the refactoring and wanted to put my work in a stash so I wouldn't have to revisit it. When I try to do this, it says: # git stash error: Your local changes to the following files would be overwritten by checkout:
app/controllers/admins_controller.rb config/environments/development.rb config/initializers/session_store.rb Please, commit your changes or stash them before you can switch branches. Aborting 0cc13bf012

Straight off the top I want to make a beginners disclaimer right here.. Thankfully the Yamaha has an excellent user manual you can grab at their website. For me anyway, it helped a lot. Now that you know.

Q: View updated in Xcode from iPhone simulator I've written an app in xcode with some images, labels and buttons - nothing fancy. I'm on the preview tab in the iPhone simulator and i've selected this view. Here's what it looks like in the simulator: And here's what it looks like when i look it up at the actual phone from iPhone simulator: As you can see the view has moved towards the left as if it's responding to some kind of touch down... Does anyone know how i can get the simulator to 'update' the view in a way that its content appears on the actual iPhone? Thanks

A: The simulator is not an accurate representation of a real device. Specifically, the simulator is not touchable so
