Q: Bash: How to run a script only once and auto-run after reboot I have a script that I want to run only once upon a reboot, and then run on future reboots, much like `hot`. How can I achieve this? I've tried using `cron`, but this does not work if the system is offline for some time. I was considering using a `cron` job for the once-upon-a-reboot task, and have the script write out a timestamp in the log file with the `cron` job. Then when the system comes back online, the `cron` job will automatically run my script, but I'm not sure if this is the best way to do it.

A: This example depends on a runnable copy of your script on the the system Run the script one time manually and check its output

#!/bin/bash # check if already executed if [ -f /tmp/script.log ] then # it is already run if [ "$1" == "0" ] # print the script has run once > /tmp/script.log echo "Script run once." else # the script has run more than once echo "Script has run more than once" fi else # print no duplicate run cat /tmp/script.log echo "No duplicate run." # set execution time ./my.sh 0 fi
```

Save the script, use `crontab` to run your script daily or weekly

#!/bin/bash # check if already executed if [ -f /tmp/script.log ] then # it is already run if [ "$1" == "0" ]
```

print the script has run once >
/tmp/script.log echo "Script run once."
else # the script has run more than once
```
