I'm not a golfer, but I am a golfer, and I play off the course in the summertime, so I'm still golfing." It's not clear whether Lewis learned of his call-up to the 2016 Ryder Cup team before or after he gave his interview with The Wall Street Journal. The Ryder Cup is one of golf's biggest events, and a captain's pick is a big honor for a player not used to being a member of a world-class roster. Lewis, who is in his 12th year on the PGA Tour, told the Journal he wouldn't hesitate to lead Team USA for the next time it hosts the Ryder Cup in 2018. "I would do it in a heartbeat, just for the simple fact that I'm competitive," Lewis said. "You want to be the best you can be, and being the captain of the team, to be the best captain, I think is a testament to your character. It's about leadership. It's about putting your team together. It's about understanding what your team needs, and putting aside your own needs and putting them together. "I think there's a lot of parallels between being a leader of your team and being a leader of a family, or a leader at work. In both of those scenarios, you want to lead with your heart and love. That's how I've led the last few years, and that's what I'll try to do as captain of the team." Lewis isn't sure how he'll manage the rigors of the trip. He said he's already been buying golf clubs for the next Ryder Cup. "I have a group of friends who golf with me, and I've asked them to help me look at some clubs that I've had in mind," Lewis told the Journal. "As long as I can find something that's appropriate, I'm not going to complain." View gallery . (Adrianna Wagner/SI) Lewis spoke highly of the team he played on that went to Medinah in 2010.
